

"Durable Goods"

Friday, 08 January 2010

When Aleathia first approached me to ask whether I'd like to submit to her microzine "Durable Goods", I had no idea what a microzone was. But then the old linguist in a far end corner of my brain poked me with his cane and croaked: "MAG = big" "MICRO"= small", ye big eejit!

When i finally got my copies in the post, I was more than pleasantly surprised. The whole idea, the layout, the way it was folded, the cover design... I just loved it. Aleathia, who is a nurse by day and a brilliant poet and editor by night, accepted two of my poems in issue five, and I'm really humbled and honoured by that. Submission is by invitation only, but have a look at the blogspot and maybe you'd even like to subscribe:

<http://durablegoodsmicrozine.blogspot.com/>